sung by boys of the Westminster School and girls of Mayfield School, Putney, conducted by Sylvia Junge. Organ: Nicholas Jackson Piano: Donald Swann. Donald Swann describes 'Sing round the year' as a collection of new carols for children, "but I do not know any satisfying definition either of a carol, or a child," he says.

Carols are not just Christmas carols. A carol is a light, gay song to celebrate a Christian event—as delightfully demonstrated here. So they can be sung all round the year, by young and old, all ages.

"The songs on this record represent the sum of my musical wanderings in this uncertain field of the carol," says Donald. "Because of the latitude I have allowed myself, two canticles, a spiritual, a hymn, and a round augment the list, which are, in their various moods of worship and praise, as good as the several songs of Sydney Carter which he himself describes as songs, ballads, or carols."

onald Swann will forever be popularly known as the musical half of the comic song writing duo Flanders & Swann; but the quintessential Englishness of that satiric output belies his exotic roots – Donald's middle name, Ibrahím, is a clue.

Donald was born in Llanelli on 30 Sept 1923 into a family of amateur musicians, both parents refugees from the Russian Revolution. His upbringing was one of Russian folk song and four-hand piano reductions of the Russian and European Romantics.

Donald Swann and Michael Flanders had been performing their own songs at cast read-throughs and private parties for some years often, as they would say "at the drop of a hat"; they gradually honed their material as a double-act. Their show, titled AT THE DROP OF A HAT, opened on 31st December 1956 and was an overnight success. A sequel, AT THE DROP OF ANOTHER HAT, opened at Theatre Royal, Haymarket in London October 1963 for a long run before reverting to its previous title for performances in Australia, New Zealand and Hong Kong.

Over the next few years Donald compiled and performed hundreds of concerts; sometimes solo or often with different performers picked to explore the variety of his output. EXPLORATIONS ONE, with Sydney Carter, concentrated on words and music in a folk idiom. The show was later expanded, with the addition of Jeremy Taylor, into AN EVENING WITH CARTER, TAYLOR & SWANN which took folk music into mainstream theatres.

Donald Swann died at Trinity Hospice in South London on 23rd March 1994.
