This recording has been made possible through the generosity of the Mouritz family, who share-farmed on land belonging to the New Norcia Benedictine community in Western Australia. It is intended as a tribute to the Spanish cultural heritage of New Norcia (recognised by UNESCO), in gratitude for piano lessons and other music instruction received by members of the Mouritz family at St Gertrude’s College, as well as to honour the high musical values and music environment of New Norcia.

Spanish music and Spanish-influenced music has been chosen for the programme of this CD, to emphasise the strong Spanish cultural influence in the forms of architecture, art, food and wine. The CD title New Norcia: A Spanish Rhapsody reflects the blending of Spanish and Australian cultures, both in the New Norcia community and in the selection of works on the disc.

New Norcia was settled in 1846 by two Spanish Benedictine monks, Dom José Benito Serra and Dom Rosendo Salvado. Salvado, a dominant and influential figure in both the history of New Norcia and that of Western Australia, gave the very first public piano recital in Perth, in order to raise money for the new settlement north of Perth. Apart from Salvado, the other most prominent musician in the Benedictine community at New Norcia was Dom Stephen Moreno (1889-1953), three of whose fine compositions feature on this recording. Since the time of its founding, many great musicians have been drawn to New Norcia, including Andre Segovia, Philip Glass, Peter Sculthorpe and Christopher Willcock.

Throughout the development of New Norcia there has been a strong musical history, with both composition and music education prominent. St Gertrude’s College, whilst a relatively poor school, promoted piano strongly, with almost all students studying piano, alongside instruction in violin, voice and choral activity. Currently the school is used as a music camp.

In addition to their religious, educational and artistic undertakings, the New Norcia community has balanced those with other activities, such as bread-making, olive oil production, an education centre encompassing aboriginal studies, thus ensuring that New Norcia remains a vital and relevant community. Further information about New Norcia can be found on the website www.newnorcia.wa.edu.au

Manuel Infante (1883-1958) – Danses Andalouses (Andalusian Dances)

Infante was born in the Andalusian region, in Osuna near Seville. He settled in Paris in 1909. He was mostly well-known for his piano works, which included two suites for two pianos. Famous Spanish pianist José Iturbi championed the works of Infante and in fact, Infante dedicated several of his works to Iturbi, including the third Andalusian Dance (El Vito). Infante unashamedly exploited the Spanish folk-idiom in his works and the three Andalusian Dances are typical of the direct attractiveness of his style. In the first dance, Ritmo, the pianos imitate castanets and rapid guitar-strumming, whilst a contrasting calm section shows a modal influence. The second dance, Sentimiento, dedicated to Infante’s wife, opens with a declamatory recitative, before developing into a compelling flamenco section. The central part of this second dance, in G flat major, is beautiful in its melodic invention and displays some very effective and sophisticated interplay between the two pianos. The final segment of the second dance imitates foot-stamping and hand-clapping. The popular Spanish folk-tune El Vito forms the basis of the third dance, Gracia (El Vito). The first half of this last dance features the El Vito theme and “variations”, whilst the concluding half is based on an original theme by Infante. DC

Joaquin Nin (1879-1949)
Four Chants d’Espagne, arr. for piano four-hands by Max Cooke (b. 1924)

During my student days, I had the pleasure of playing these four songs in a version for violin and piano. I enjoyed them so much that, many years later, I made an arrangement for piano four-hands from the original score for voice and piano.

Montañesa

This is a mountain song from Castile. Although he was from Cuba, Nin’s music often depicts wonderfully the expanse and aridity of the Spanish countryside. The use of open fourths and fifths, without intervening thirds or sixths, seems to convey this emptiness. The Spanish scene is also coloured by the sound of church bells, which would frequently be heard in reality.

Granadina
Andalusia in the south provides much music with Flamenco characteristics. The song contains lively rhythms, accentuated by the foot-tapping of the dance which is associated with it. There are guitars and perhaps castanets, and the song itself has a typically Moorish line and ornamentation. This can only be described as colourful.

Saeta (Invocation)
Again from Andalusia, there are many Saetas, and they are used as a religious song for the processions of Holy Week which pass by. In this Saeta, the descending harmonies express the sadness of the moment and there is also an insistent toll of a heavy church bell, deeply mourning the passing of Christ.

Tonada del Conde Sol
This song, from Murcia, is the most rhythmically exciting of the four. It depends upon a lively 6/8 rhythm with sparkling plucked guitar sounds. Following a short introduction, the bass takes on a rapid one-bar figure which continues throughout the piece until the Coda. This repetitive figure has a hypnotic effect, building up the excitement throughout until the end. MC

Manuel de Falla (1876-1946) – Siete Canciones Espagñoles (Seven Popular Spanish Songs)

1. Al Paño Moruno
Al paño fino, en la tienda,
una mancha le cayó;
Por menos precio se vende,
Porque perdió su valor.
¡Ay!

2. Seguidilla Murciana
Cualquiera que el tejado
Tenga de vidrio,
No debe tirar piedras
Al del vecino.
Arrerios semos;
¡Puede que en el camino
Nos encontremos!
For your great inconstency
I compare you
to a coin that passes
from hand to hand;
until it finally wears out,
and, believing it false,
no one accepts it!

3. Asturian Song
To see whether it would console me,
I drew near a green pine tree.
Seeing me weep, it wept;
And the pine, being green,
wept to see me weep.

4. Jota
They say we don’t love each other
because they never see us talking
But they only have to ask your heart and mine.

Now I bid you farewell,
your house and your window too,
and even though your mother objects …
Farewell, my sweetheart
until tomorrow.

5. Nana
Duérmete, niño, duerme,
Duerme, mi alma,
Duérmete, lucerito
De la mañana.
Naninta, nana, Naninta, nana.
Duérmete, lucerito
De la mañana.

6. Canción
Por traidores, tus ojos,
voy a enterrarlos;
No sabes lo que cuesta,
»Del aire«
Niña, el mirarlos.
»Madre a la orilla Madre«

Dicen que no me quieres,
Y a me has querido…
Váyase lo ganado,
»Del aire«
Por lo perdido,
»Madre a la orilla Madre«
7. Polo
Guardo una, ¡Ay!
¡Guardo una pena en mi pecho, ¡Ay!
Que a nadie se la diré!

Malhaya el amor, malhaya, ¡Ay!
¡Y quien me lo dió a entender! ¡Ay!

Manuel de Falla (1876-1946),
arr. Gustave Samazeuilh (1877-1967)
Two Spanish Dances from La Vida Breve (The Short Life)

De Falla’s opera La Vida Breve (The Short Life), set to a libretto by Carlos Fernandez Shaw, was premiered in 1913. The opera runs to only an hour’s duration, however it is as well-known for the fact that it contains as much instrumental music as it does vocal music. The first of the two Spanish dances stems from a wedding scene in the opera and became famous particularly as a result of Fritz Kreisler’s transcription for violin and piano.

Stephen Moreno (1889-1953)
Three compositions

Stephen Moreno was a Catholic priest and musician, born 16 January 1889 at Corella, Navarra, Spain. He was baptised as Antonio, the eldest of four sons of the watchmaker Juan Moreno and his wife Juana, née Escudero. Introduced to music by his father, Antonio was later taught to play the piano by Mr Resa, organist at the local church. In 1904, aged 15, he entered the Benedictine abbey of El Miracle at Llerida, near the Pyrenees, with the intention of coming to Australia. In 1906 he began his novitiate at San Juliano d’Albaro, Genoa, Italy. He was professed and took the religious name Esteban (Stephen), then travelled to Rome in 1907, spending seven months there furthering his music education. Dom Moreno studied for a year under Signore Boezzi and met Lorenzo Perosi, who encouraged him in his initial efforts at composition. Whilst in Rome, he was recruited to the Benedictine Community of New Norcia, Western Australia.

Moreno reached New Norcia in December 1908, where he acted initially as assistant organist, before being appointed organist and choirmaster within a few months (a position he held until his death). He was ordained in 1913. He returned to Europe for further training in Munich (1921). Moreno composed more than twenty Masses, numerous motets and litanies, five Te Deums, offertories for the liturgical seasons and for feasts of the saints, as well as presentations and adaptations of Gregorian chant. He composed Australia’s first orchestral Requiem. In addition to his religious works, Moreno composed many secular works, including works for orchestra, piano, art songs, as well as a variety of works for brass band.

Romance for violin and piano

The Romance for violin and piano was composed for Lorraine Basedon (a student at St Gertrude’s College New Norcia). It develops a short motive introduced in the opening measures of the violin part. A more rapid interlude in the middle of the work explores briefly an off-shoot of this motive in a more agitated guise, before concluding with a rather more earnest recapitulation over a more static harmonic setting.

Spanish Serenade for violin and piano

Spanish Serenade is a veritable tableau of musical anecdotes, from the occasional moments of bravura, to spirited folk-dance and gypsy style. It was composed for the Reverend Albert Lynch, who gave the first performance at His Majesty’s Theatre, Perth, on 11 July 1936. Harmonically, the work is mostly uncomplicated, except for its occasional modulations, with infrequent alternation of major and minor keys.
Maurice Ravel (1875-1937) – Rapsodie Espagnole (Spanish Rhapsody)

Ravel’s mother came from the Basque region and this Spanish heritage came strongly to the fore in several of Ravel’s works, notably in Rapsodie Espagnole, in Boléro and in his opera L’heure Espagnole (The Spanish Hour). Ravel’s first version of the Rapsodie was for four hands at one piano, though it is often performed on two pianos, perhaps due to considerable technical challenges in the last movement particularly. The earliest part of the four-movement suite, the Habañera, dates from 1895, whilst the three other movements were written in 1907-08. As with a number of his other piano works, Ravel orchestrated Rapsodie Espagnole.

Described by Paul Serotsky as “one of the sultriest, sexiest pieces of music ever to curl up an audience’s toes”, Rapsodie Espagnole embodies several sides of Spain. The opening Prélude presents a mysterious haze reminiscent of noises in the quiet of night. The second movement, Malagueña, is based on the style of a fandango from the region of Málaga. The Habañera presents the juxtaposition of triplets against a dotted rhythm, as exploited by Ravel in his Piece en Forme de Habanera, written also in 1907. The concluding movement, Feria (“free day” in Latin), is quite possibly meant to convey the festivity of a religious celebration: certainly, the mood is celebratory. DC

The Team of Pianists

The Team of Pianists is dedicated to the promotion and preservation of Classic music, not just for the sake of the art of music, but for its importance to humanity. The European traditions of music, particularly chamber music and solo piano music, belong in the kinds of venues that the National Trust preserves and maintains.

The Team of Pianists is a partnership, which as Artists-in-Residence for the National Trust, is housed at Glenfern in East St. Kilda. Since 1994, the Team has been giving concerts during the winter at Rippon Lea (Twilight Chamber Music at Rippon Lea) and in the summer in various historic venues in and around Melbourne (Classic Music in Historic Venues).

Audiences are attracted not only by the venues, but also because some new and challenging music is introduced alongside the more traditional works which they know and love already. In addition, on occasion the Team selects some very talented emerging artists to perform alongside established professional musicians. The Team provides valuable educational activities under the Glenfern Piano
