For a number of reasons this is very special recording. Firstly it has given me the chance to play with one of the most talented younger generation guitarists / composers in Australia. Second, it allows for me an uncommonly long association with Move Records and Martin Wright to continue. And of course it is well known that Martin has in his beautiful recording studio one of the best pianos imaginable. (It's a Yamaha by the way.)

The music you will hear is a mix of original pieces, some by Peter, some by me (Goodbye Michel was written in memory of the great pianist Michel Petrucciani), as well as some pieces from the standard jazz repertoire. Both of us love to play standards as well as our own works, not only because it makes a nice balance between old and new but also because it would be silly to discard altogether the great musical vehicles of the past, which of course lend themselves wonderfully to improvisation.

There is something else about this recording which you might like to know, and that is that the performances were not over-burdened with endless rehearsing and planning of arrangements. Of course we practiced away from one another, and on the day decided to just see what happened by keeping our ears, our minds, and even our eyes open to what was happening musically. Is this not the spirit in which all spontaneous music making should be made?

We hope you like this music. It was recorded with great care and mutual respect.
